MODULE #8 An Introduction to Rheumatology

Presented by Linda Bradbury, Rheumatology Nurse Practitioner

Linda completed her nurse training in London and specialized in rheumatology in 1998. In 2005, she moved to Brisbane working within the rheumatology department at the Princess Alexandra Hospital and co-ordinated several research programmes at the Queensland University of Technology. She has over 40 publications. In 2019, she commenced as a Nurse Practitioner (Rheumatology) at the Gold Coast University Hospital.

She completed MSc Advanced Health Care Practice in 2006, Nurse Practitioner Masters in 2012, became endorsed as the first Australian Rheumatology NP in May 2013 and is the current chair of the Rheumatology Health Professionals Special Interest Group of the ARA.

This module will provide an overview of common rheumatological conditions. These will be presented in the way of case studies, introducing the disease, radiology and pathology pertinent to that condition with brief treatment and management information....

The module will discuss:

- Differentiation between common rheumatological conditions
- Utilisation and relevance of key pathology used in common rheumatological conditions
- Utilisation and relevance of key imaging used in common rheumatological conditions
